POST-PRESENTATION FOLLOW-UP

“98% of your income depends on follow-up.”

— GRANT CARDONE

Most reps leave it on the table.

POST-PRESENTATION FOLLOW-UP

Specialist Follow-Up Framework

KEY (curious) tonality | (pause) audio cue | (let them answer) stage direction | [FILL IN] placeholder

THE CORE PRINCIPLE

A follow-up only works if it's high-intent on both sides — and it only compounds into real revenue if the follow-up game is consistent. That comes down to four things:

- Locked live, not vague. "I'll follow up" dies. "[DAY] at [TIME]" lives.
- High status, low pressure. You're carving time out for them — not chasing them.
- Never give without asking. Discounts, extensions, inclusions — anything you offer needs a real reason behind it. Without one, you sound like every other salesperson pulling levers to close a deal, and everything you said earlier starts to feel like fluff. With one (case study, signage, photo, referral), it becomes a real transaction — both sides giving something, both sides happy. That's what makes the offer believable to them, and to you.
- Follow up consistently. One follow-up is a chase. A consistent stream of follow-ups is a pipeline. The reps with a steady follow-up rhythm don't have slow weeks the same way everyone else does — there's always someone in the queue close to deciding, always a deal warming up in the background. Skipping follow-ups doesn't just cost you the deal in front of you. It costs you the compounding effect of every deal you'd have closed three weeks from now.

Across every touchpoint in this document — calls, voicemails, SMS, emails — the tone is casual and personal. You're texting a mate who happens to be doing a deal with you. Not a customer.

PART 1 — CLOSING THE CALL WITHOUT A SALE

When the customer doesn't say yes on the call, your only job is to lock the follow-up live. Don't let them off the phone with "I'll think about it and get back to you."

THE PITCH

| BOOKING THE FOLLOW-UP

Owner: SPECIALIST • Trigger: End of presentation, no close • Channel: Phone

I completely appreciate that, [NAME] — to be honest, I'm pretty similar myself, I don't like making big decisions on the spot either. (genuine, casual)

We're pretty under the pump at the moment as you can imagine with the [REBATE / INITIATIVE], so let me squeeze in a quick 30 [DAY or DAY+1] to go over everything in detail and answer anything that's come up for you over the next couple of days, just to help you guys out. (reasonable, helpful)

If that sounds fair, just let me know what day works better. (casual, curious)

WHY THIS WORKS

- Agreement — "I'm pretty similar myself" — disarms instantly.
- External pressure — "under the pump with the rebate" — scarcity that's about the company, not your ego.
- Specific timeframe — "30 minutes [DAY or DAY+1]" — concrete, close, hard to refuse.
- Real value — "answer anything that's come up" — gives them a reason to show up.
- Closed choice — "what day works better?" — they're choosing between two days, not deciding whether to follow up at all.

BRANCH A — THEY AGREE EASILY

Don't just lock the date and hang up. You've earned a few extra minutes of warm conversation by booking the follow-up — use them to deepen the relationship before you go. While you're still on the call:

- Recap the key value points (awards, savings, what makes you different).
- Reinforce any guarantees (savings guarantee, install warranty, etc.).
- Add value where you can — share something extra they didn't see in the presentation.
- Ask questions to surface hidden objections: "Before we wrap, while I've got you — is there anything you're not totally clear on, or anything that's playing on either of your minds?"
- Answer anything that comes up — you've earned the right to take a few extra minutes here.
- Reinforce the deadline so urgency carries through to the follow-up.
- Confirm best contact and best time for the follow-up call.

The customer often walks away more convinced than if you'd pushed for the close — because you didn't push. Reverse psychology. They appreciate the breathing room.

Don't overstay though. Once the follow-up's locked, a bit of warm chat is fine — great, even — but read the room. The moment it starts feeling like you're stretching the call, wrap it. Leaving them wanting more beats squeezing every second out of the conversation.

BRANCH B — THEY PUSH BACK ON THE DATE

"We can't decide by then because..."

This is where the manager extension play earns its place. Frame it as you advocating for them, not closing them.

MANAGER EXTENSION — INITIAL ASK

Owner: SPECIALIST • Trigger: Customer pushes back on follow-up date • Channel: Phone

I completely understand — I do want you guys to be 100% comfortable in your decision. (genuine, reasonable)

(brief pause — looking up, deep in thought, like you're working something out) I'll tell you what.

(considering, genuine) Let me see if I can give my manager one last call to see if I can get approval on extending the time you have to look over everything. (helpful, advocating) Do you mind holding the line one more time? I'll try my best, guys, for you, honestly. (sincere)

You're not asking permission to sell. You're asking permission to fight for them.

MANAGER EXTENSION — COMING BACK

Owner: SPECIALIST • Trigger: Returning to the line after the manager call • Channel: Phone

All good — just spoke with management. (casual) Best they can do is hold the [OFFER / PRICING / INCLUSION] for [EXTENDED DATE]. (matter-of-fact, authoritative)

We can't push it past then, but that gives you guys a proper window to sit with it. (reasonable) Are you happy to lock in [DAY] at [TIME] to pick it back up? (casual, curious)

Re-lock the follow-up at the new date. Same high-intent framing.

PART 2 — CADENCE BETWEEN CALL AND FOLLOW-UP

Touches scale to the gap. Don't spam short windows. Don't go silent on long ones. Across all of them, the vibe is identical: short, casual, like texting a mate.

LOOP BOTH PARTNERS IN

Before any of the cadence below kicks off — wherever possible, set up a group SMS thread with both partners on it, and CC both their emails on the recap. Solar is a household decision. Texting one partner means the other's hearing about it second-hand (or not at all), which is exactly how follow-ups die quietly. Looping both in keeps everyone on the same page, removes the "I have to check with my partner" lag, and makes you look organised in the process.

If only one partner gave you their number on the call, ask for the other's at the end of the presentation: "Quick one — can I grab [PARTNER NAME]'s number too so I can loop them in on the recap? Saves you having to forward everything." Reasonable, low-friction, almost always works.

THE CADENCE RULE

- 1–3 days out → night before (or morning of, if call's late in the day) — quick confirmation text.
- 4–7 days out → mid-window "any way I can help" prompt → night-before confirmation text.
- 7+ days out → same as 4–7. Don't add more touches just because there's more days.

Follow-ups shouldn't really be booked more than 3 days out anyway. If they are, more touches don't help — they just feel like chasing.

2.1 EMAIL + SMS COMBO

Owner: SPECIALIST • Trigger: Immediately after the presentation • Channel: Email + SMS

The email is the recap. The SMS is just a quick poke to make sure they saw it. Send the email first, then the SMS within a few minutes.

Subject: Everything from our chat — for you and [PARTNER NAME]

Hi [NAME],

Great chatting with you and [PARTNER NAME] [THIS MORNING / TODAY / EARLIER]. Genuinely confident the system we put together is going to deliver a great outcome for your place.

Just a quick recap on the key bits before I let you go through everything properly:

Your system

- [SYSTEM SIZE + INCLUSIONS — e.g. 11.4kW solar + 20kWh battery]
- [ANY PREMIUM UPGRADE OR CASE STUDY INCLUSION]
- [MONITORING PLATFORM, IF RELEVANT]

What's included

- [KEY WARRANTY 1 — e.g. 25-year workmanship warranty]
- [KEY WARRANTY 2 — e.g. 10-year parts and labour cover]
- [KEY GUARANTEE — e.g. 100% savings guarantee]
- [ANY OTHER PREMIUM INCLUSIONS]

Attached

- Savings breakdown (the main one — shows what you'll save year-on-year)
- Indicative system design
- [ANY OTHER DOC THAT'S ACTUALLY RELEVANT — keep it to 2-3 max]

We've locked in a quick 30 [DAY] at [TIME] to pick it back up and answer anything that's come up.

If anything pops into your head before then, just give me a buzz on [MOBILE] or shoot me an email.

Cheers,

[SPECIALIST NAME]

EMAIL PRINCIPLES

- Keep attachments to 2-3 max. Savings breakdown is the only must-have. The rest is optional and only if it actually helps them think it through.
- Don't write a sales novel. Real customers don't read 6-paragraph emails. Bullet what matters, leave the rest for the follow-up call.
- Personal opener, personal sign-off. Like you're emailing someone you genuinely connected with — because you are.
- One light call to action. Not three. "Buzz me if anything pops up" is enough.

SMS — sent right after the email

Owner: SPECIALIST • Trigger: Within minutes of email • Channel: SMS

Hey [NAME], just flicked / sent everything through to your email. Let me know if it's come through on your end, thanks.

That's the whole text. Don't pad it. SMS is personal — it's not where you re-pitch.

2.2 MID-WINDOW PROMPT (4+ day follow-ups)

Owner: SPECIALIST • Trigger: Mid-window between presentation and follow-up • Channel: SMS

Hey [NAME], just looping in — if there's any specific questions or anything you want me to focus on for our call, flick it through so I can best help you guys.

Not a chase. Not a content drop. Just a genuine prompt that gives them an active role. Whatever they reply with becomes ammo for the follow-up call itself.

Don't send case studies or testimonials at this point. They know you're trying to sell — extra content makes it obvious. Just offer help.

2.3 NIGHT-BEFORE / MORNING-OF REMINDER

Owner: SPECIALIST • Trigger: Night before, or morning of if call is late in day • Channel: SMS

A few example variations — pick whatever feels most natural:

"Hey [NAME], just confirming we're still good for tomorrow at [TIME]?"

"[NAME] — got you penciled in tomorrow at [TIME]. Hopefully that still works."

"Hey [NAME], just checking we're still good for [TIME] tomorrow. Yell out if anything's changed."

The shorter the better. This is just a touchpoint to keep the appointment alive — not a sales moment.

PART 3 — THE FOLLOW-UP CALL ITSELF

When the booked time arrives, the call has its own structure. Open the same way every time — what they say next branches into one of three scenarios.

OPENING (every call)

Owner: SPECIALIST • Trigger: Start of follow-up call • Channel: Phone

Hey [NAME], how's your day been? (casual, friendly) Yeah, mine's been flat-out too. (casual)

As mentioned, just touching base to see if you're happy with everything? (casual, curious)

By the follow-up they've usually decided together. Don't force the partner back on the call — it signals you don't trust them, and they made the decision as a household already.

SCENARIO A — HAPPY TO PROCEED

ACKNOWLEDGE + LOCK ORDER FORM

Owner: SPECIALIST • Channel: Phone

Awesome — thanks for putting your confidence in us, genuinely appreciate it. (genuine, sincere)

Now move fast. The window between "yes" and "signed paperwork" is where deals die.

Right — the most important thing for us to do right now is get the order form and finance application completed so we can lock everything in officially. (authoritative, helpful)

Because you've been approved under the [OFFER / CASE STUDY / PRIORITY PRICING], management is fast-tracking your install — which is great for you, because the sooner the system's on your roof the sooner you start saving. (reasonable, casual)

Here's how this works: I'm going to send you the order form in the next 30 minutes — just need a digital signature, can be done from your phone. (casual, matter-of-fact) Can you get that done in the next hour? (curious)

MOVE STRAIGHT TO FINANCE

Owner: SPECIALIST • Channel: Phone

Perfect. Next thing — the number one thing that holds up an install is the finance application. We need to get that done today to officially lock this in. (authoritative, serious)

I'd really appreciate if you can work with me to get it sorted today, and we'll take care of everything else from there. (helpful, reasonable) Sound fair? (casual, curious)

IF THEY HESITATE OR WANT TO DO IT LATER

Owner: SPECIALIST • Channel: Phone

Look [NAME], I get it — but it really has to be done today. (genuine, firm)

Even if you knock the application over now and upload the documents tonight, that works. Once it's submitted, management puts a complete hold on the system in our warehouse for you. Without that, nothing's locked in. (reasonable, serious)

RECAP WITH PEN AND PAPER

Owner: SPECIALIST • Channel: Phone

This forces engagement. They're not just listening, they're committing.

Before I let you go, quick recap — have you got a pen and paper handy? (casual, urgent) I've got another meeting to get to so I'll move quick. (reasonable)

The "another meeting" line isn't about manufacturing urgency — it's about giving the customer permission to not feel obligated to keep you on the line while they fill out the finance application. Most customers actually want you to stay so you can guide them through it; that's totally fine, stay as long as feels right. The line just exists in case you read the room and sense they'd rather knock it over on their own — that way you've got a clean exit without it feeling like you're rushing off.

Awesome. Three things to get done today:

1. Order form — coming through in the next 30 mins, just digital signature.
2. Finance application — link will be in your email, you'll need to verify ID and upload two recent payslips.
3. Power bill / site photos — text them straight through to me.

I'll pop you a message once it's all in your inbox. Any questions, just give me a call. (casual, friendly)

CONFIRMATION SMS (sent immediately after the call)

Owner: SPECIALIST • Channel: SMS

Hey [NAME], make sure you get the order form and finance app done today so we can lock everything in for you. Yell out if you need anything.

Personal tone. Like texting a mate, not a customer.

SCENARIO B — NEEDS MORE TIME

ACKNOWLEDGE + EXTENSION ASK

Owner: SPECIALIST • Channel: Phone

No worries [NAME] — I totally get it if you didn't have much time to sit with it. (genuine, reasonable)

I'll have to check with management to see if I can hold the [OFFER / PRICING / INCLUSION] for you, but I won't be able to push it much longer. (matter-of-fact, helpful)

I do know they were keen on using your install under [CASE STUDY / FAST-TRACK / AREA PRICING]. (casual)

The latest I can probably extend is 48 hours — management needs everything finalised no later than that. (authoritative, serious) Before I try to get approval on this, can you commit that you'll have looked over everything and let me know either way by [DAY]? (curious, fair) I don't mind either way — just need to know.

IF THEY CONFIRM

Owner: SPECIALIST • Channel: Phone

Sweet. I'm speaking with management later this afternoon, I'm confident I can get this extended. I'll text you once I know. (casual, helpful)

Before I go though — while I've got you on the phone, are there any questions or anything specific that's holding you back from making the call? (curious, genuine)

That last question is critical. It's your chance to surface the real objection before the deadline runs out.

EXTENSION SMS (sent ~2 hours later)

Owner: SPECIALIST • Channel: SMS

Wait so it looks like you actually had to fight for it. If you send it 5 minutes after the call, they'll know you didn't even ask.

Hey [NAME], all sorted — got approval to hold it till [DAY]. Can't push past then though. I'll touch base [DAY]. Yell out if anything comes up.

SCENARIO C — NOT INTERESTED / PRICE

OPEN — ASK FOR HONEST FEEDBACK

Owner: SPECIALIST • Channel: Phone

All good [NAME] — do you mind giving me some honest feedback so I can understand what's holding you back? (genuine, reasonable)

Listen. Don't interrupt. Don't argue.

(when they give you the reason) Do you mind me asking what your reason for saying that is? (curious, genuine)

That second question is the unlock — it's where the real objection comes out. The first answer is almost always surface-level ("too expensive"). The second answer is the truth ("we're not sure if you guys are legit," "we want to get other quotes," "we're worried about the install team," etc.).

RELOOP ON VALUE

Once you've got the real objection, reloop on the things that address it:

- The savings guarantee.
- The risk of going cheap or with a dodgy installer.
- What makes your install different.
- Any social proof from their area.

THEN PLAY THE LAST CARD — SMALL ASK BEFORE THE DISCOUNT

| THE SMALL ASK

Owner: SPECIALIST • Channel: Phone

I'll tell you what [NAME], there might be one last thing I can do for you. (genuine, considering)
Before I get into that though — if you were to go solar, would you have any issues with [SMALL ASK]? (curious, casual)

THE SMALL ASK — PICK WHAT FITS THE COMPANY

Anything genuinely small. Common options:

- Sign out the front of the house for a week post-install.
- Photo of the system + a Google review post-install.
- Allowing the install to be filmed for marketing.
- Becoming a case study referral for nearby leads.
- Letting the company use their bill comparison in marketing.

WHY THE SMALL ASK MATTERS

The small ask isn't a manipulation play. It's the reason the discount exists. Without a reason, the discount sounds like you were hiding margin all along — which kills your credibility on everything you said earlier. With a reason ("we need to use your install as a case study"), the discount makes sense — to both of you.

| IF THEY AGREE TO THE SMALL ASK

Owner: SPECIALIST • Channel: Phone

Awesome. Tell you what, leave it with me — I need to get back to you tomorrow because I have to get sign-off from management on a couple of things. (casual, helpful) I'll come back with what I can do. (reasonable)

Don't give the discount on the call. Always require management approval. Positions the discount as exceptional, not standard.

| NEXT DAY — COME BACK WITH A CLEAR, TIME-BOUND OFFER

Owner: SPECIALIST • Trigger: Day after the small-ask call • Channel: Phone

Hey [NAME] — chatted with management. They've approved [DISCOUNT / INCLUSION] on the basis of [SMALL ASK]. (casual, matter-of-fact)

This offer's good until [DAY at TIME], we can't extend it past then. (authoritative, serious) Where are you at? (casual, curious)

Lock a definite day and time for their decision. Better to agree on this on the phone than via email.

PART 4 — NO-SHOW / GHOST FLOW

If they don't show to the booked follow-up. Keep it minimal — at this point, they've heard the full pitch and chosen not to engage. Chasing harder won't help.

| 4.1 CALL ONCE

Owner: SPECIALIST • Trigger: 3 minutes after start time • Channel: Phone

Try them once. Don't call repeatedly — calling 5 times back-to-back signals desperation.

4.2 NO-SHOW SMS

Owner: SPECIALIST • Trigger: ~10–15 minutes after the call attempt • Channel: SMS

Hey [NAME], tried to jump on at [TIME] but couldn't get hold of you. All good — yell out when you've got a sec and we'll find another time.

That's the whole no-show flow. If they don't reply to the SMS, leave it. They've decided. If they want to come back, they will.

PART 5 — THE FOLLOW-UP AUDIT

Every rep, every week, blocks 30 minutes to go back through their pipeline and check nobody's been forgotten. That's it. That's the whole thing. It's not glamorous and it's not complicated — but it's the single highest-ROI half hour in the week.

What you're looking for:

- Anyone you spoke to in the last 30 days who hasn't had a touch in 7+ days.
- Anyone who said "not right now" a few weeks back — circumstances change, and a casual check-in often catches them at exactly the right moment.
- Anyone whose follow-up call you ran but didn't get a clean yes or no on — those are the ones most likely to have quietly drifted.
- Anyone in Scenario B (Needs More Time) whose extension deadline has passed without you closing the loop.
- Anyone you remember thinking "I'll get back to them next week" — and didn't.

WHY THIS MATTERS

The deals you remember to chase aren't the problem. The problem is the ones you don't remember — the ones that slip out of your head between presentations, get buried under newer leads, and quietly cost you thousands without you ever noticing.

Every rep has a stack of these. Every single one. The audit is what surfaces them before they go cold permanently. Most of the time the message itself doesn't need to be clever — a casual "hey, just circling back, where's your head at?" is enough. The work is in remembering to send it at all.

Don't let extra revenue sit on the table just because you forgot it was there.

UNIVERSAL PRINCIPLES

- The follow-up is booked live, on the call. Vague follow-ups die.
- Loop both partners in. Group SMS, CC both emails. Solar's a household decision — don't text one half and let the other find out second-hand.
- High status, low pressure. You're carving time out for them, not chasing.
- Match touch density to the gap. No spam on short windows. No silence on long ones. More days doesn't mean more texts.
- Never give without asking. No discount, extension, or inclusion without a real reason — sign, review, photo, case study, referral. The ask is what makes it a real transaction instead of a sales gimmick.

- Follow up consistently. A steady follow-up rhythm is a pipeline. Reps who keep the queue full don't have slow weeks like everyone else.
- Audit your pipeline weekly. 30 minutes, every week. Catch the ones that slipped before they go cold permanently.
- Surface the real objection. "Why?" then "Why?" again. The second answer is the truth.
- Manager approval is for real extensions, not closing tricks. Use it sparingly to keep its credibility.
- SMS is personal. Text customers like a mate, not a corporate rep. Short, casual, no "congrats on your wise investment" lines.
- Don't chase ghosts. One SMS after a no-show. If they want back in, they'll come back in.
